

Lifestyle
Range

Select from a wider choice to suit your lifestyle.
Our most popular range has something for everyone.

Monochrome bathroom

Roper Rhodes unit
basin and WC

Vado Omika Brassware

Crosswater Infinity
shower screen

Original Style tiles

The brief

Create a minimalist but practical upstairs bathroom, drawing on some elements from the downstairs cloakroom.

3D drawings

Find us on

The solution

Because the bathroom was a good size, there was room to box-off the pipework to allow for a wall-hung WC and basin unit. This created a sleek, minimalist look.

The client chose a Crosswater Infinity shower screen with a deflector panel so they could have a practical walk-in shower. They opted for black detailing to tie-in with the Original Style tiles.

The Vado Omika brassware was chosen specifically for its beautiful geometric detailing. It adds some quirk to the minimalist design of the bathroom and matches in with the brassware in the downstairs cloakroom.

Meet the Designer

Arran Barker-Hutchings

Experience: 6 years

Based at: Romsey

Favourite colour: Copper

I love working on bathroom projects with a twist. I'm a huge fan of anything that's a bit funky or has some quirk to it.

One of my favourite projects to work on was a bathroom in an American style house that allowed me to push the boundaries of design. I came up with some crazy ideas that the clients loved and let me run with. I was even able to design some units and have them made.

I like taking ordinary spaces and showing clients all the different possibilities.

T 01794 338555

E arran.barker-hutchings@elliotts.uk

Creating this bathroom was a joy. The clients knew the look and feel that they wanted, so it was a great room to work on.

We matched in with some of the elements of the statement cloakroom downstairs, but kept the overall design paired back. However, we did use the beautiful Vado brassware to give it a hint of quirk.

Arran, Designer