The solution

The clients wanted to create an impact with this guest cloakroom.

The standalone bath creates a wow factor, enhanced by the statement tiled wall. Lighting underneath the platform the bath sits on gives the illusion of the bath levitating.

The Vado Omika brassware was chosen specifically for its beautiful geometric detailing. It adds some quirk to the minimalist design of the bathroom.

We picked a HIB Ambience mirror to fill the wall as you walk into the cloakroom. At 140cm wide it grabs your attention instantly, but also adds additional light to an otherwise dark room.

I love working on bathroom projects with a twist. I'm a huge fan of anything that's a bit funky or has some quirk to it.

One of my favourite projects to work on was a bathroom in an American style house that allowed me to push the boundaries of design. I came up with some crazy ideas that the clients loved and let me run with. I was even able to design some units and have them made.

I like taking ordinary spaces and showing clients all the different possibilities.

This project was a dream to work on! It's rare to design such a large cloakroom, and especially one that makes such a statement.

I had great fun with the clients creating this room and was really able to push the boundaries. The bath is such a talking point, but my favourite part was adding the lighting underneath to make it look like it's levitating.
